

FREE COINAGE ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY.

The statement that the retirement of $100,000,000. of National Bank notes, and the substitution of silver certificates based on the purchase of $100,000,000. of silver bullion, would undoubtedly put silver to par, is an admission that the bill passed by the late Congress will not do so; that the purchase of 54,000,000 ounces per annum is not enough. A later and better ascertainment of statistical facts concerning the production of the metal and quantity to be cornered, shows, according to Mr. Stewart, that the purchase of $100,000,000. worth of silver bullion in four years and the substitution of silver certificates based on bullion will probably be necessary to effect what was intended by the recent silver legislation, and what has been claimed confidently had already been effected.

The silver legislation to date is an attempt to purchase a metal in bullion form, convert it into a coinage the stamped value of which differs from the bullion value of the metal in the coin, and by the purchase and storage of enough silver bullion force the value of the bullion itself up to par, with the stamp value on the face of the coin. Silver having depreciated in the markets of the world, its intrinsic value having declined, its ratio of value with gold having changed, the Government of the United States has set out to guarantee and perpetuate its value to the former parity with gold, without regard to the present or future supply of the metal, and there is no argument so ingenious as to be able to hide the simply common sense truth of this statement.

The 24th. of October, when the Government had completed its purchase for the month, silver descended to less than 1.05. The closing purchase of 200,000 ounces of silver was at the rate of 1.04.98 and the amount offered on that day was 1,500,000 ounces. Thus on the day of the closing purchase there was five times as much offered as could find a market. The regular despatches, announcing this fact, declare that there is no doubt that the miners and smelters in the West have greatly increased their production and made a very large and heavy collection of the metal when the agitation of the new silver law was started. The same despatches declare that there is a surplus of silver in Europe as well as here and concludes with the statement that on that day the value of the silver in a dollar was 82 cents. The highest point reached in this attempted inflation of the metal was 1.21 1-2. We have witnessed a steady decrease until the recession promises at an early day to reach the point from which it started, and thus afford another example of the fallacy of attempting to coin a metal at any other than the intrinsic value of the bullion coined.

Yesterday's purchases witnessed a still further decline, closing at 1.03, with transactions amounting to 600,000 ounces. The total purchase for this month to date was 2,180,889 ounces.

The Government finds itself confronted with more silver than it can buy under the present law. To repeal this law would result in a smashing of values which would be felt throughout the United States. The fall would widen the old gulf between gold and silver. The only way out now is free coinage, which will soon absorb the surplus silver and give to the West the greatest prosperity it has ever seen.

Free Traders say that we cannot increase our foreign trade under protective laws, but the statistics are against them. In 1870 our export and imports together aggregated $828,000,000; in 1890 they were more than double that amount, being $1,648,000,000. Pretty good progress this, under a system supposed to be repressive of foreign trade.

THE MANHATTAN

Life Insurance Co.,

ASSETS - $12,000,000.

BETTER THAN A

GOVERNMENT BOND.

The MANHATTAN for a limited period will offer the residents of Nevada a Bond Combining Insurance and investment that is in reach of all and which every healthy able-bodied man in the State should possess—for the protection of himself and family.

In explanation read what follows: Suppose a special agent of the U. S. Treasury Department should call on you today and say:

The Government would like to sell you bonds for any amount between $1,000 and $30,000 and if it is not convenient for you to make the investment at once, we will allow you to pay for the bonds in Ten Equal Annual Installments.

And, suppose, in addition to this, the Government, wishing to make this the most desirable investment in the world, should stipulate in the bond, not only to pay them at the end of the term, but in case of your previous death, to pay them to your family and AT THE SAME TIME RELEASE YOUR FAMILY FROM PAYING ANY FURTHER MONEY.

Would you not at once close with such an offer? And yet this is practically what the Manhattan Life Insurance Company, of New York has done and is doing.
